Capturing Images with Your Mobile Device The camera on most mobile devices works in exactly the same way as that on any camera except for a few special features (for example, it's not possible to zoom with the phone's camera). Mobile cameras generally have two exposure settings: auto (which records pictures automatically based on the flash sensitivity of the device) and manual exposure. While these are much the same in their effects, there are some noticeable differences between the two settings. In this section, we explore the features of the mobile phone camera and the process of snapping a picture.

Otsego County Public Library The Otsego County Public Library is a public library system in New York State, United States. It is the only public library in Otsego County and serves a population of about 42,500. History The library was founded in 1895 as the Otsego County Free Library Association, of which Andrew Carnegie donated £8,000 to its establishment. It moved to its present location, the former Joseph Reardon estate, in 1921. In January 1997, the library absorbed the William B. Hay Library and the Robert Chambers Memorial Library, both operated by the Throggs Neck Public Library. In 2004, the library joined the North American Library Association in the National Information Infrastructure Circle (NII-circle) as its service provider. In July 2010, the Otsego County Public Library completed a $4.3 million renovation of its building at 6 Balfour Square in Oneonta. Collection The library collects both print books and electronic books. The library has four branch libraries, all of which have internet connections. Branches All of the branches, which are linked to the main library, are located in the county seat of Oneonta. Oneonta Library Kipps Memorial Library Lake George Library Clarks Center Library The Libraries are open Monday–Wednesday and Thursday–Saturday 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Sunday 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. The main library is also closed on December 25 and January 1st. Other one: it looks like the first cut was a prequel of sorts, but they felt that it was important to bring the story full circle with this movie, so it's interesting to see what the full reveal was going to be. In any case, I think that what we're about to see is fun in the moment, but the long-term impact of this whole

Media playback is unsupported on your device Media caption A special report on the Beastie Boys' trademark fight. The music group Beastie Boys is back in the Supreme Court to argue it does not have to pay money damages to Adidas. The case is being heard by nine justices of the UK's highest court after Adidas lost a trademark infringement case in the UK's Court of Appeal. The two bands claimed the German sportswear company's name "confused consumers" by selling sneakers with the same "WOW" logo. The case was brought by lawyers acting on behalf of the US group. Judge Christopher Hatton ruled in April 2012 that Adidas's "WOW" logo was confusingly similar to the group's "BEAST" mark, although he did not grant the American group the full protection they were seeking. Not Puma In a ruling last week, Lord Justice Keith agreed with Adidas's lawyers that the German company did not infringe on the Beastie Boys' "WOW" trademark. And he said the US group's argument that Adidas's original 12-word design for the WOW logo, which was slightly different to the "BEAST" logo, breached UK design regulations, was "incorrect and unhelpful". The Supreme Court is hearing the case because Lord Justice Keith, who retired from the Court of Appeal in September, could have taken the case to appeal. The band has welcomed the Supreme Court's ruling and said it would be "appreciative of a return to dealing with the issue on the merits". The band has said it is "apprehensive that the Supreme Court may focus on certain aspects of the UK decision, such as how much weight should be accorded to the similarities in the ways in which the designs were presented, the websites, the colour of the marks and overall likelihood of confusion". The Supreme Court is hearing the case at the Royal Courts of Justice in London.Hurricane Irma Sweep Near Key US East Coast Cities Seen as 'Hitting Areas of Greatest Consequence' By Vanessa Luhrs Aug. 24, 2017 3:19 p.m. ET (Updated at 4:27 p.m.) The most powerful Atlantic Ocean hurricane ever recorded hit the eastern coast of Florida, cutting a path of destruction and billions of dollars of damage that is threatening to
