A month and a half after we published an article about video tape to your hard drive, we thought, "Hey, this is a great idea, but... where would the tape get inserted?" Of course, there was actually a really good answer to that. We're going to walk you through it now, along with the best way to do it. This guide is for people who have never used a tape drive before. If that's you, then check out our how to tape section. How to Insert a Tape The video tape in most cameras is formatted the same way as music and other tapes. If you have a videocassette recorder, you will already have this information. On the main menu, select the disk drive and then look for a menu that says something like "Format Video (VHS-C, VHS-L, VHS-S, VCR)." If you don't have a VCR, you will need to find the manual for that particular drive. It should be easy to find because that is the menu you are probably on right now. If you have a computer, you can do a Google search for a manual for that particular model. Most of the time, all you have to do is set up the drive to take the tapes in and out using a common tape format like VHS-C (standard VHS format). If you have a VCR, then you will be able to format the tape to fit that format as well. When you insert the tape, you'll notice that there is a slot for the tape to get into. If you are using tape from a different format, simply format the tape to that format. Most VCRs will allow you to do this. Now you can start to record. How to Play a Video Recording If you are getting a new computer or a computer with a new, modern operating system, you will probably have to download additional software in order to play the video on your computer. Most video players now use the common and popular QuickTime format which is used by almost all digital video

Q: PHP: How to find out if a page is being refreshed or if it's being redrawn

I'm creating a new webpage which has a lot of information which needs to be dynamically included, but I'm wondering how I can make sure that the fresh data isn't rendered if the web-page has been previously viewed. How can I know this? Is there a way to compare the last time the page was opened with the current time? I'm sure there are a lot of answers out there for this question, but I haven't been able to find any that compare the "last time the page was opened with the current time" so I figured I'd ask.

A: if(!isset($_COOKIE["lastVisit"])) $_COOKIE["lastVisit"] = time(); if(time() - $_COOKIE["lastVisit"] > 1.5) //datas will be refreshed

You can also set the last visited time in PHP with setcookie(), but it's up to you. You may want to look into solutions like this one:

A: If you want to check if the page has been updated since the last visit, you can check if the $_SESSION['last_update'] exists or not:

if(isset($_SESSION['last_update']) && time() - $_SESSION['last_update'] > 1.5) { // the page has been updated at least a minute ago }

For a more generic solution, you might also check the last accessed time:

if(isset($_SERVER['HTTP_IF_MODIFIED_SINCE']) && $_SERVER['HTTP_IF_MODIFIED_SINCE']
